At Harvard, I plan on earning a Bachelor's degree in Computer Science. That will be my major. However, I would also like to take courses relating to business as my minor. Using my degree, I first intend on getting a job working at a technology company such as Google, Facebook, or Amazon. After working in this field for a few years and gaining experience as a computer programmer, I plan on starting my own business. First and foremost, I would like to start some sort of company based in Uzbekistan, which is where all my family resides. If I managed to build a strong and valuable company, I would be able to supply all of my family members who live there with employment and appropriate wages. Currently, most of them live from paycheck to paycheck and some of them are even below the poverty line. Some of these relatives helped raise me as a child and I feel as if I owe it to them to try and make their lives better. This is what I hope to accomplish first with my degree.
